“Look away from the sun it’s too bright now. It’s too light now. It won’t shine another day.
A little girl is on the run, she’ll be too close now, like a ghost now... I remember she would say.

Don’t ever leave me baby I think I would die. Don’t ever leave me baby.

Pointe shoe on the floor is still burning, we’re still turning, like the darkest pirouette.

Can’t glue anymore, bodies broken... body’s frozen, in a dancer silhouette.

Don’t ever leave me baby I think I would die. Don’t ever leave me baby I think I would die.

In this house I’m getting out with all the tears I’ve cried...

Don’t ever leave me baby.

Missing you is a storm, wind scream trust me, wind screams Dusty...howling in the night.

Watching you take form in dreams are lucid, dreams of music make me feel alright.

Don’t ever leave me baby I think I would die. Don’t ever leave me baby I think I would die.

In this house I’m getting out with all the tears I’ve cried.

Don’t ever leave me baby I think I would die.

Don’t ever leave me baby I think I would die.

Well in this house I am getting out with all the tears I’ve cried.

Don’t ever leave me baby.”
